

CRESTED GECKO

CORRELOPHUS CILIATUS

INTRODUCTION

Crested Geckos are great climbers, due to their toe pads and prehensile tails. Crested Geckos are well known for their great personalities and generally docile temperaments, but can be skittish or jump when handling. Crested Geckos should be handled carefully, as they can drop their tail when stressed, and do not have the ability to grow it back. If you're looking for an interactive reptile, a Crested Gecko is the way to go!

MORE INFO

Crested Geckos are omnivores, meaning they love a variety of mainly bugs and fruits. The best way to achieve this is by feeding a crested gecko diet like Pangea or Repashy and supplementing this with crickets or waxworms. Any insects should be doused in a calcium supplement with D3 to allow for calcium absorption. A multivitamin supplement is also recommended at least once per week.

Lighting and heating requirements can easily be maintained with a low wattage heat lamp or a UVB lamp.

ENCLOSURE BASICS

Standard tank size for one Crested Gecko: 20 gallons

Crested geckos love to climb and explore, so a larger tank is always better. Crested geckos are arboreal, which means that they need plenty of decorations to climb on, as well as a tall tank. We recommend a variety of decorations such as plants, sticks, and cork rounds. The best substrate to use is a mixture of coconut fibers, moss, and bark, in order to maintain proper humidity.
